

Struck Paper In York, Pa. Changes Hands

YORK, Pa., Oct. 19 (AP) — The York Gazette & Daily, a morning newspaper with 33,000 circulation, has been sold and will be published under the name the York Times.

The new publisher, Murray C. Hotchkiss, said he planned to put out the first edition Tuesday morning. He spent the afternoon meeting with the International Typographical Union which struck the paper Oct. 8 after the pay of its members was cut 10 per cent.

The afternoon newspaper, the York Dispatch, went ahead with plans to publish a new morning newspaper starting Wednesday. It will be called the Morning Journal.
